Travel Literature and Official Guide

The Gazette Travel Bureau has just received several pieces of travel literature on the Pacific Northwest and Summer Outings in Wisconsin and Michigan which are free to those wishing them. While the railway time-tables are being changed so frequently "The Official Railway Guides" can be relied upon for as definite information as possible at these times. The Official Guide, a book of more than 1000 pages, is reprinted and corrected each month and contains the time-tables of every transportation line in this country. It also indexes every station and indicates the fares of railway running into it. The Gazette Travel Bureau is a subscriber to the Railway Guide and its use is free to the public.

EXECUTIVE BOARD HELD MEETING ON THURSDAY

WAR FUND COMMITTEE OF "YOUR SHARE IS FAIR" PLAN HELD MEETING AT MYERS HOTEL TO RECEIVE REPORTS—WORK NEARLY FINISHED.

STILL SOME SLACKERS

Committee Reports That There Are Still Several Slackers in Rock County Who Refuse to Pay—Will Make Names Public.

The War Funds Committee of Your Share Is Fair, held an executive meeting at the Myers Hotel on Thursday with the following members of the executive committee in attendance: T. O. Howe, chairman; R. M. Richmond, Evansville; Andrew McIntosh, Edgerton; Jas. W. Conway, Edgerton; C. W. Birkenmeyer, Edgerton; H. E. Bailey, Beloit; Geo. S. Wolcott, Beloit; W. E. Seymour, Beloit; Chas. F. Lathers, Turtle; J. I. Green, Clinton; M. O. Moutat, Janesville; K. E. Wisner, Janesville; Geo. S. Parker, Janesville.

Reports were listened to from the various members of the executive committee and it was found that the majority of the cities and towns had checked up with the treasurer with the exception of one and that is expected to be in this week. When this done, a statement of the amount of money received, amount of notes outstanding so that all who have contributed will know just how much money has been received and what has been paid out.

The national needs of the Red Cross have already been taken care of in that people in Rock County have not been solicited for Red Cross funds this year when the drive was on all over the county. The local needs of the Red Cross have also been provided for under the War Funds Committee and an additional fund for the next two months was made, to take care of the local needs of the Red Cross for the coming months.

This money will be paid to the local Red Cross branches located throughout the county when the allotment is made in Rock county.

The needs of the Y. M. C. A., the Knights of Columbus and the War Recreational fund will be taken care of, so that there will be no canvassing of soliciting people in Rock county during the year 1918 for funds for the recognized war benevolences.

The Salvation Army who are doing such wonderful work in the front lines in France, have been officially recognized by the president and war board as one of the approved war benevolences.

Rock county's allotment for their war work is $500 and which sum was voted from the "Your Share Is Fair" fund.

In the discussion it was found that the banks in the various parts of the county still hold a considerable amount of notes which people signed instead of paying cash when the amount was collected. It was suggested that all who have not paid their notes and the last note was due July 1st, take the matter up at their local bank, pay the note and the bank will give them a receipt for it.

A further discussion took place in regard to the few shining yellow spots throughout the county who have not paid their "Your Share Is Fair" fund going to support the Red Cross, Y. M. C. A., Knights of Columbus and the War Recreational fund. One example was given in Janesville of a well-to-do man, a retired farmer living in the Third ward whose assessment and "fair share" would be something like $50 who tried to evade payment and show how small it is possible for a man to be by trying to compromise on a basis of $5.00 which he claimed was given to the Red Cross.

There is another example of a man, a well-to-do farmer in the town of Avon, who has paid nothing.

Such examples as these are known and the odium attached to these men who refuse to back the boys who are giving their lives for their country in France today will be such as to make them to be shunned and pointed at with a finger of scorn for all time to come.

Ways and means were discussed and a plan hit upon which will probably be used to force to show publicly the names of those who have not paid as the number is so small as compared with the number who have paid. So it was thought best to let the public only the names of those who have not paid as people who have paid have a right to know who has not.

There are some who have not paid and who have been overlooked. Those people have volunteered to pay and have taken it up with the treasurer or some member of the executive committee and have paid and gladly should there be any others who have not paid, unless they are of the few disloyal class who refuse to pay, the executive committee or the treasurer will be very glad to hear from them.

FOR EMERGENCY FARM WORK.

FARM LABOR AGENCY, No. 150.

In the canvass of the city by the Chamber of Commerce, many willing volunteers are being found among the business people and others and it is hoped that by the first of next month the labor committee will have on hand a large number of cards from which to draw on for farm labor supply as calls come in from the farmers who need help. If a farmer needs help for a quick brief period, he may apply to the Chamber of Commerce at Janesville for the assistance of an emergency squad which will be taken to his place and put to work. The men making up these squads will be in charge of a leader and while not expert in farm work, many of them have had experience. A charge of 30c per hour is to be made for their services which will be paid by the farmer in turn be donated to the Red Cross.

Various points of the county are being organized for emergency farm duty, much the same as Janesville.

Full information can be secured from the Chamber of Commerce or Farm Agency 150 Gazette.

CHICAGO MARKETS.

Chicago, July 20.—The hog market took another spurt yesterday and top and the small proportion of good hogs were responsible factors.

Week's receipts thus far are 6,000 smaller than Chicago than last week.

At the seven primary western markets the decrease is 31,000 hogs. Packers are in need of more good hogs than are coming.

Quality has been exceptionally poor lately and the annual crop of common and medium packing hogs is being liquidated freely. These hogs do not fit the army demand, as they are not heavy makers which is the principal pork commodity needed for export. The hog market is 2¢ higher than a month ago and $3.10 higher than a year ago.

Cattle—Medium and light weight cattle have been hammered hard all week and values now are 25c to 50c lower for steers of that class. Many of the medium and heavy beefers are of the medium weight with the good kinds off 50c. Receipts of short fed grassy bovine stock have been exceptionally large and buyers took advantage of the surplus to lower their bids.

Good lambs are meeting a strong demand, but packers have had so much stuff direct this week that they cannot buy much. Buyers are being hard thing lacking quality has been hard to get. Yesterday buyers got most of the fair to good lambs at 15¢ to 18.25, there being nothing of choice variety offered.

Common Cattle Lower.

Friday's receipts of cattle consisted mainly of common and medium grades on both sides and butcher stock. Many common and medium grades are selling at $11.00@15, while steers are willing to pay up to $18.30 for the best heavy.

Medium cows and heifers are mostly a dollar lower for the week. Cows are $8.00@10.00, good calves are a little higher than a week ago, selling at $16@17.25. Good feeding cattle are meeting with a fair outlet at $11@12.

Quotations: Native steers $17.00@18.30.

Good to choice steers 17.00@17.85.

Common to medium 12.00@15.00.

Steers 16.00@17.75.

Yearlings 16.00@17.50.

Cows and heifers 11.00@14.00.

Canning cows and heifers 6.75@17.75.

Native bulls and stags 7.75@13.00.

Stockers and feeders 8.50@12.25.

Poor to fancy calves 12.00@17.25.

Hogs 15 to 20c higher.

Demand was very strong for good quantities of hogs. Receipts were estimated at 16,000, not large enough for the requirements of the trade. Top was quickly raised to $18.60, the highest since last October.

Most of the good light and medium weight butchers hogs sold at $18.25@18.55 and the bulk of the packing hogs of common and medium quality went at $17.25@17.75. The supply was well cleared.

Quotations: Light butchers $18.25@18.60.

Light bacon 18.20@18.60.

Good heavy hogs 18.50@18.50.

Best heavy hogs 17.25@17.75.

Tough to heavy packing 16.70@17.25.

Poor to best pigs 15.50@17.50.

Sheep Sell Steady.

No quotable change was noted in the market for sheep and lambs. The supply was 8,000, of which packers had 5,000 direct. The crop for sale consisted mainly of common to medium native lambs at $17.75@18.25.

A few common to good native ewes sold at $10@18.

Quotations: Good to choice native lambs $18.00@18.50.

Common to medium 15.50@17.50.

Lambs 17.75@18.00.

Western lambs 17.75@18.00.

Good native ewes 3.00@10.50.

NOTICE

It would be most patriotic for everybody to eat more GOOD POPCORN AND PEANUTS and thus save the sugar, the chocolate and other necessities for the soldiers in France. POPCORN is a good war time food—it contains a great deal of nourishment and we should all eat more of it.

I carry a line of popcorn and peanuts that is the best in every respect. I pay good prices for same and I know you want the best. Why not buy your popcorn and peanuts where you get the best and where you get your money's worth? I have had years of experience at this and can prepare it to suit a "Queen's taste." ART LEAGUE HELD
PICNIC YESTERDAY

Home of the Art League Held At
Home of Mrs. Sanford Soverhill
Yesterday.

An interesting talk along the line of the effort now being made by artists who are fighting for France, was made by Mrs. H. S. Lovejoy at a meeting held by the Art League at the home of Mrs. Sanford Soverhill yesterday afternoon. She explained that the American committee de luxe made by the artists in the intervals when they were not actively engaged in duty. She offered her home for an exhibit of these pictures, as soon as details of the plan could be arranged. The offer was gratefully accepted by the League, and the announcement of date will be made later. These are the same kind of pictures which the League have already purchased three.

The League have promised to adopt French orphan and plans were made to raise money for this purpose, without touching the dues of the club. Two-ice cream socials, have been arranged for the purpose of raising funds, one to be held at the home of Mrs. Blacoon, and the other at the residence of Mrs. Finner. They will be in charge of Mrs. Faust and Miss Orchard. The next picnic of the organization will be held at the school building, about the second week in August, as guests of Mrs. Hooper. Mrs. H. D. Murdoch is chairman of this committee.

This fund already raised for Furlough Houses in France, was also reported on by the secretary, Mrs. Ehringer.

The resignation of Mrs. May Regan, on account of removal from the city, was accepted with regret. Also the proffer of a gift of bound Art Books on several topics, by Mrs. Regan was accepted gratefully, by the League, as they realized that they would form a valuable addition to their library.

A delicious luncheon was served at one o'clock, by a committee composed of Mrs. Frank Spoon, Miss Grace Spoon, Mrs. Arthur Fisher, Mrs. Rose, and Mrs. Paris. Several out of town guests were present. Mrs. Cunningham and Miss May Cunningham of Los Angeles, Mrs. E. B. Korst of St. Augustine and Mrs. L. Sanborn of Madison, and Mrs. Maud Davis of Philadelphia. About 60 ladies were present at the luncheon. A social time was knitting and the music of the victrola, helped to make an enjoyable afternoon.

BUSINESS OFFICE OPEN SATURDAY EVENING.

OUR SATURDAY NIGHT.

The Old Lady came in laughing. "Well, I heard a mighty funny story just now," said she, "and yet 't wasn't so funny, either!"

Her son William looked up with a twinkle. "Sounds like the feller that said he certainly did have a jolly good time at his old uncle's funeral," said he.

But the Old Lady was not to be discouraged when she had a story to tell. She gave William a look, and proceeded.

"Sarah Speers was reading me a letter she had from Teddy, that joined the navy. Teddy's in one of those submarine chasers that are takin' care of New York, and he wrote he was standing watch one night when another feller sang out, 'Light off the port bow, sir!'"

"Naturally, with one light, and that a white one, everybody aboard thought they were about to have their heart's desire, which was to come up with a submarine. So they woke up all on board, and put on all the speed the boat could make, which was 'some,' Teddy said. If the vessel off the port bow had had the usual lights they wouldn't 'a' thought so much of it. But they figured out that the one white light must be showing through a little window or something they had aboard those submarines—stop laughing!—I ain't up in the pattern of 'em."

"So on and on they went, and sure enough the light begun to rise up—and Teddy says that's the way a light always does, at sea, when you get closer. In fact, that's the way you know you are getting closer, there being no sign-posts nor milestones out there to go by."

"They went on and on, tossing and rolling and foaming up the waters something fearful. And then—"

"Then all of a sudden the Captain said something Teddy said he'd better not write down, and stamped off to his cabin. In another minute the word got 'round the vessel. For about twenty minutes or more they'd been chasing the morning star, just a-rising!"

When the laugh had died down, the Old Lady added, "But that was the funny part, and the part that ain't funny is the best part."

"And what's that, mother?" her son asked, indulgently.

"Well, all the way home I was thinking—many and many a boy is learning to follow a star in this war—a star of some great big idea. No, I don't mean ideal. I mean plain idea. Take a fellow that lost his ma, maybe, when he's little, and turn him out of 'is army; do you reckon he's going to go dirty afterwards? Take a feller that thought he was a little mite better than some other boys that had less—how's he going to feel when a man drives up to his house with a truck load of coal, along in the year 1920, and he finds it's the boy that brought him back from No Man's Land on his back, when he was wounded? Take a boy from some of those mountains that are so shut in by themselves that all the rest of the world's shut out—how's he going to feel when he finds that fist rule and gun rule aren't the only laws in the land, and the only way to be safe is to keep your neighbors safe too?"

"My goodness! The more I think about this war, the more I realize what it's going to do for the world! If it doesn't teach our boys anything better than to follow a star,—well, that'll be something!"

William made the obvious remark. "Providing the star's the right one!"

The Old Lady tossed her head. "There ain't but one star that'll rise for each and every one of our boys, son! You don't need to be afraid of that! The boys'll come back with new ideas of decency and cleanliness and discipline, of brotherly kindness and of what's worth while and what isn't; but the morning star they'll all be looking for is I-L-O-M-E!"

"I thought you said there wasn't an ideal in it?" William teased.

"Oh, shu!" said the Old Lady. "You go on with your supper!"

This little story by Edith Barnard Delano, of "The Vigilants," is so suggestive that it merits more than passing thought. The old lady was right in her estimate of what army life and discipline is doing for our boys in the way of development. The average boy is very largely a law unto himself, long before he arrives at the age of twenty-one, and for that reason he goes out into life in a more or less defiant attitude.

The average home is not a good disciplinarian, and this applies to all kinds of homes. The preachers' boys are not always Angelic, and the best Christian homes, so-called, where the father is long-winded in prayer and exhortation, and where the mother knows more about the heathen than she does about the children which God has given her, often turn out boys which are a terror to the community.

Homes less pretentious—and usually more prolific—are often troubled with the same lack of wholesome discipline. The fool laws on compulsory education, which attempt to compel a boy to go to school, and forbid him to work, are directly responsible for the horde of youthful criminals which infest all large centers of population, and which puzzle so many homes in all communities, to know what to do with their boys. You can't compel a boy of fifteen to go to school, against his wish, but you can encourage him to go to the devil, at rapid stride if permitted to live in idleness.

Wisconsin has long been noted for freak laws, and the one under discussion is among the freakiest, a relic of the heritage left by the State Senior Senator, whose name no longer appears in the columns of the American press. This law, which encourages boys to become loafers and criminals, is the product of fool legislators, who pose as reformers, stimulated by organized labor. It is unjust to the boy, and frequently works a hardship to the home, where the few dollars he might earn are badly needed.

If there was ever a time when boys should be encouraged to work, that time is now. The country demands every ounce of productive strength which it possesses, and to place an embargo on any class of labor is a crime. Then, too, light employment is infinitely better for the boy than idleness. The paper route which keeps him busy for an hour or two. The time that he may spend as a caddy, on the golf course, or a great variety of light occupations that may keep him out of mischief, and awaken ambition to earn a dollar, all his own, should be considered a blessing and not a crime.

But the Old Lady who talked about our boys over there, had a vision, and the star on which her vision centered, was the old home. She knew something about boys, because she was a mother, and it required no stretch of imagination to discover the thought which was uppermost in the minds of our great army of boys in France and on the way. The heart of a boy lies so close to the surface that it is never difficult to reach. He may have been thoughtless and careless, and the monotony of home life may not have appealed to him, but with the war came a great awakening, and the home has taken on new significance.

The letters published almost every day from the boys over there, are usually addressed to the mother. Many of them are the first letter that the boy ever wrote to his mother. In coming to himself amid the new and strange surroundings it is not surprising that the mother in the old home claims first attention. The boy appreciates his mother today as he never did before, and with this appreciation he is coming to realize that his mother's God is not a myth. He may never have had very much use for the church, but for the first time in his life he is doing some sober thinking, and a breath of prayer, every now and then, is in his heart.

George Patula, writing for the Saturday Evening Post, has been at the front for a year, and for the past three months with Captain Caldwell's regiment. The captain speaks of him, in a letter published the other day, and says that his stories are true to trench life. In his last story Mr. Patula tells about going out alone in No Man's Land and getting lost. The shells were bursting all around him and when he became entangled in barbed wire he thought his time had come. Then, he said, "I pray for deliverance, and I hadn't thought of God for fifteen years." Then he added, "A good many of the boys are praying that never prayed before."

When our children come back from school after a few months' absence, we are glad to note the changes, and evidences of development, but when our boys come back from the army—as very many of them will—we will hardly know them. They will be not only strong in stature, but strong in every other way, because the hard experiences of life have developed character and manhood in marked degree. The generation, of which they are an active part, will be a stalwart generation, tried in the crucible of fire, and not found wanting.

Much is said these days about the importance of preparing for peace. It is well to bear in mind that our army of boys, which is fighting for us abroad, will be an important factor in laying the foundation for a new and better civilization. "The world democracy," for which we are contending—is a term of broad significance. It means more than the decapitation of Kings and the downfall of Kingdoms. It means the wiping out of oppression of every sort and kind, in this and every other land. America is in position to lead in this great movement. Shall we be equal to the occasion?

WHOS WHO in the Dax's News

LEON TROTSKY

From a $12 a week job on an obscure newspaper, and a cheap East side lodging house in New York to international prominence is a long jump in an ordinary man's career, but Leon Trotsky made the leap in a few months.

In the Bolshevik movement in Russia, Trotsky has been the leading cat's paw of the forces behind the scenes. He is the man who drove Alexander Kerensky from power.

Trotsky is a typical revolutionist and has been in the limelight of Russian affairs almost ever since he returned to his native land last spring.

The United States government investigated Trotsky's movements while he was in New York in 1917 and failed to get any evidence that he had been supplying the German money, but the department of justice traced a close relationship between Trotsky and Ludwig Lore, editor of a German Socialist paper for which Trotsky wrote editorials.

He was president of the Soldiers and Workers' union and a moving spirit in the revolution in Russia in 1918 and was expelled to Siberia.

He escaped, fled to Japan and afterward lived in Switzerland, then went to Berlin, where he published a Jewish Socialist paper.

When the war began he was expelled from Berlin and went to Paris, where he started a Russian paper called "Our Words."

It soon became apparent that his paper was causing discontent among Russian troops on the western front and he was ousted from France, taking refuge in Barcelona, Spain.

He was jailed for a few months and when he secured his freedom sailed for New York, arriving there Jan. 14, 1917.

He left New York for Russia May 27 last year. He was detained by the United States authorities at Halifax, but upon the request of Kerensky was released.

Trotsky was born in a little Jewish colony in the province of Kerson, "Little Russia." In 1915 he was president of the first Council of Workers' Delegates at Petrograd.

His real name is Leon Bronstein. "Tail" broad shouldered, gaunt, a little over forty, with blazing eyes, he is a picturesque character.

ON THE SPUR of the MOMENT

ROY E. MOULTON

We are pained to see a misprint in a New York evening paper. The paper meant to say, "The Triumph of our ideals," and it said, inadvertently, "The triumph of our meals." Of course, every one knew at once it was a mistake. The triumph of our meals, indeed! They're nothing to brag about.

Among the other stuff not fit to print is summer politics.

If all of those new barnmaids were really pretty the prob's would have an awful time carrying some states we know of.

Herb Hoover is going to take a little trip over to England to see Lord Rhonda, the English foot controller, and find out how to do things. If that means the English diet for us when Herb returns, we—oh, ah, ahem!—oh, very well!

Shut and shut!

But names will never hurt 'em.

A Dutch inventor has evolved a telephone securely safer than a lead pencil which depends upon the heat generated in a piece of platinum wire by electricity to record vibrations. It is said to be very efficient.

But the old-style phones are efficient enough—especially in transmitting bad news. When there is any bad news on tap the old-style phone will ring its head off, and if you don't respond, will come and grab you out of bed. If it is good news, the phone tinkles once very faintly and passes away.

During the past year we have become pretty well fed up on slogans. We have had slogans for breakfast, lunch and dinner, but none of them seemed to hit the spot.

"Treat 'Em Rough," is a slogan that slugs.

Just Folks

By Edgar A. Guest. THE HELPFUL MAN.

He never saw the trouble; he only saw the deed.

He never thought of distance; his mind was on the need.

He never reckoned money as a prize worth clinging to;

He said its only value was the good that it could do.

He never stopped to reckon what he'd miss, of joy, to stay

And help a fellow being who was stranded on the way.

Never paused to think of pleasures that he'd cherished long and planned;

All he saw was one in trouble who must have a helping hand.

There seemed nothing so important that he wouldn't turn aside

For the man who needed friendship and was really trouble-tried;

He wasn't one to answer, "I have something else to do."

He thought his foremost duty was to help a man he knew.

He never saw the trouble; he only saw the deed.

He never thought of sacrifice; his mind was on the need.

And he had this simple motto, which he followed to the end:

"When the other man's in trouble, that's the time to be his friend."

BOTTLING PLANT IS INSTALLED HERE BY BIG DAIRY COMPANY

Kee and Chappell Adds Equipment to Bottle Entire Output of Milk
Before Sent to Chicago.

Equipment to bottle their entire output of milk before it is sent to Chicago has been installed at the Kee and Chappell Dairy company plant, 1414 Center avenue. Bottling machines and washers costing close to $20,000 have been added to the plant's equipment and this improvement will mean the additional employment of from ten to twelve men, according to Supt. R. A. Yates.

The first shipment of bottled milk will be made Monday, but not a large amount. It will be nearly two weeks before the entire output will be bottled because of delays in shipment of materials and the necessity of adding more men to the labor force. The present working force of the factory is eleven men, but the extra labor involved in bottling the milk will practically double this number in a short time.

Practically all of Kee and Chappell's dairy plants in southern Wisconsin and northern Illinois bottle all milk before sending it to Chicago, and the plant here is among the last ones to add this improvement. Some difficulty was experienced in securing the necessary equipment, owing to the war scarcity of metals.

The call sent out for 10,000 more pounds of milk means that the plant will be able to increase the amount of milk handled because of the new bottling equipment. The plant should be able to take care of all milk offered HCDL by farmers next winter.

LIQUOR DEALERS PLEDGE SUPPORT TO CITY COUNCIL

Adopt Resolutions at Meeting of Local Liquor Dealers' Association.
Request Military Police.

Several important measures were passed by the Janesville Liquor Dealers' Association at a meeting held Thursday evening in the Bismarck hall. Among the measures passed was one offering a standing reward of $50 for the arrest and conviction of anyone found selling liquor to soldiers.

A resolution was also adopted by the members pledging their support to General Martin at Camp Grant be asked to detail military police to Janesville for work on Saturday and Sunday. The resolution was adopted by the Honorable Mayor and Common Council, City of Janesville.

We, the officers and members of the Janesville Retail Liquor Dealers' Association, wish to assure your honorable body that it is our earnest desire and offer you our every assistance to the end that the laws governing the sale of intoxicating liquors to all men in the military and naval service of our country be strictly observed and enforced, and further that anyone violating these laws be punished to the full extent of the law.

We also recommend to your body that the commanding officer at Camp Grant be asked to furnish the city with the proper number of men from his command, known as military police, to co-operate with our city authorities so that these laws may be rigidly enforced, and further that anyone violating these laws and properly reported to him, be denied any privileges of leave of absence to visit our city at any future time.

That any licensed liquor dealer in our jurisdiction found guilty of the violation of this law, that his license be immediately revoked.

W. E. Lawver, president.
Tim McKeligue, secretary.
John Flannery, treasurer.

Attend the Chautauqua tomorrow and hear Madam Grace Hall Riheldderfer sing.

MEMBERS ARE URGED TO ATTEND MEETING

As never before the value of community co-operation is made manifest. Bought home to us are facts that one is compelled to look square in the face. Standing pre-eminently above all others, however, is the necessity that each of us who calls this city "home" must recognize the demand for the co-ordination of effort and the conservation of our resources.

The Chamber of Commerce, a chamber of citizenship, is the powerful means to bring this co-ordination and co-operation to fruition.

Each member of the Chamber of Commerce should make it a point to be present at the meeting to be held next Friday night, at which time the new managing secretary will be formally introduced. The new civic spirit, now so manifest in Janesville, should give expression on this occasion by generously welcoming the man who comes here to take up the work of the Chamber of Commerce.

Make a note of this date as it will mark the beginning of a new era in Janesville's development.

2,000 ROUNDED UP AS SLACKERS IN MILWAUKEE

Milwaukee, July 20.—The federal draft draught swept through the city Friday night and the result of the roundup was between 1,500 and 2,000 alleged evaders of the selective service draft.

Pool rooms, restaurants, theaters, cafes, saloons and hotels in the downtown district, the marine district along Reed and Clinton streets, the public parks and water fronts were searched thoroughly for material that should be carrying arms for Uncle Sam.

A drive began at 8 o'clock when officers of the department of justice and the American Protective League swooped down on the Plantation Arcade among the other places in the city that were raided early. The Empire theater, Wisconsin hotel and Union hotels, Northwestern and Union hotels, Juncus park, Majestic, Subway, Cosmopolitan, West Side and Wells hotels, Medford hotel and the Pool halls, Madison hotel and the Chicago and North Western about 500 men were taken, while at the Empire theater the men taken were estimated at 300.

The men picked up were hurried to the government building in automobiles furnished by volunteers, where they were questioned by a corps of men and women and then either released or sent to for further examination.

The officers arrived at the Plantation Arcade unexpectedly while hundreds of young men were present.

YOUNG IOWA MINISTER DROWNED YESTERDAY IN LAKE KOSHKONONG

MORRIS V. BREED OF STEWART,
IOWA, CONGREGATIONAL
MINISTER OF EDGERTON,
TON, DROWNED.

BODY NOT YET FOUND

Body Not Recovered After All Night Search—Victim Was Only Nineteen Years Old.

Morris V. Breed, Congregational minister of Edgerton, was drowned yesterday afternoon in Lake Koshkonong. A boat which he had taken out in order to go in swimming was found with the clothes of the drowned man last night. His body has not yet been recovered. Mr. Breed was only 19 years old. His home is in Stewart, Iowa, where notice of his death was sent to his father, who is expected to arrive today.

Mr. Breed went to the lake early in the day and was to meet a friend, Sylvester Burdick, in the afternoon. Mr. Burdick went to the meeting place, but when Mr. Breed did not put in his appearance he returned to his home, thinking of the people of the Hoard hotel telephoned in that a boat containing Mr. Breed's clothing had been found floating in the lake. Mr. Breed was a sophomore at Grinnell college, Iowa, and was in Edgerton only for the summer months. Although he had been there but a short time, he had already endeared himself to his congregation, especially to the boys in the church. He was a bright and eloquent speaker and regarded by everyone as a fine man in the position. Everything possible is being done by members of the congregational church to recover the body.

the length of the picture, the facts which it showed were of such absorbing interest, that the audience was kept at close attention.

Douglas Fairbanks at the Majestic, the first part of the week in "Taggart" fixes in, had some strenuous work to do. He took the part of an idle young man, who becomes interested in a poor girl, Bessie Love, who is obliged to sing and dance in a low class saloon, as the only thing she can find to do. Douglas becomes the "bouncer" in the saloon, whose duty it is to eject the troublesome toughs. He does it thoroughly from the start, and wins the enmity of a gang who try to do him up. Here is where he shines.

The "Devils' Wheel," a later attraction, takes in the story of a young girl, whose father has made a study of the roulette, and perfected a method to beat the wheel. The father is killed, and the daughter, injured by a blow on the head, so she loses memory. She is taken to the underworld of Paris, where her subconscious memory enables her to play the wheel. Rather weird in spots, but an absorbing story.

Carmel Myers in the "Marriage Lie," took the part of a young girl, beaten in the life struggle, who pretended to be the wife of a young engineer. The latter was supposed to land a big contract. If he was settled in life and was married. After trials, in which the employer of the absent engineer, figured largely, the couple were really united.

DR. C. C. MITCHELL

Doctor Mitchell's task in life is to talk—not at the air, but to the point. Like twin currents, humor and pathos run through his lectures. He is a master of epigrammatic, witty phrases, filled with a wealth of common sense.

His work is clean, convincing and instructive. His voice is clear and his message as distinctive as Gabriel's. He brings home the big things of life, the measuring of a man. "The Story of an Ash Heap" or "The Millionaire of Oz" is a modernizing and popularizing of the world's most ancient drama.

story was told, in "Unclaimed Goods," where Vivian Martin represented a young girl sent by express to her uncle in a mining town. When she arrived, the town was in the hands of the lawless element, and the uncle had no money to pay the charges. She was to be sold to the highest bidder, when the opportune arrival of her father, changed matters.

Viola Dana, is another pretty little star, seen in a western play, at this theatre. This time she was a fiery Mexican girl, who turned out to be the heiress of a large ranch. The Mexican characters, introduced, and the western atmosphere, was very typical of the country.

The "Naughty, Naughty," of Edd Bennett, was the most charming sketch of the daring things, an innocent girl could do to shock the sensibilities of a provincial town. The country characters were very well taken, each of them being a careful study of well known public characters in a small town, and the whole thing was very well done.

Another interesting chapter of the serial running at the Myers, "Vengeance and the Woman," was seen on Saturday, together with a clever boy story, "A Judge Brown Episode."

The Sunday play was, "Little Miss No Account," in which Gladys Leslie took the part of a young girl who ran away from the abuse of a step father, and was befriended by a humble family, who took her in, and cared for her. Her adventures formed an interesting story, and she twice melted sweet and quaint in such the same way as Mary Pickford. A small boy and his dog helped to make human interest.

TO RETURN KAISER'S GIFTS WITH BULLETS

[BY INTERNATIONAL NEWS]

Washington, July 20.—Samuel S. Stein, of New York City has sent to the War Department a bronze medalion souvenir received from German sources, which he asked to have melted into bullets for American forces.

Stein declared he was a passenger on the first voyage of the steamship Imperator and, as such, received the medalion, which shows a picture of the ship on one side and the likeness of the Kaiser on the other.

"It is my earnest wish," Stein wrote to the War Department, "that this piece of bronze be either melted into bullets or used in some manner that will rebound on the man whose face is portrayed thereon—the man who is our common enemy."

Gunner Depew

By ALBERT N. DEPEW

Ex-Gunner and Chief Petty Officer U. S. Navy—Member of the American Legion of Honor—Captain Gun Turret, French Battleship Cassed—Winner of the Croix de Guerre.

Copyright, 1918, by Betty and Britton Co., Through Special Arrangement With the George Matthew Adams Service.

When I got so that I could move I went over to where the captain was standing, looking through a periscope over the parapet. I was very nervous and excited and was afraid to speak to him, but somehow I thought I ought to ask for orders. But I could not say a word. Finally a shell whizzed over our heads—just missed us, it seemed like, and I broke out: "What did you see? What's all of the news?" and so on. I guess I chattered like a monkey.

Then he yelled: "You're the gunner officer. You're just in time—I've located their mortar batteries."

I surely wished I was the gunner officer. I would have enjoyed it more if I could have got back at Fritz somehow. But I was not the gunner officer and I told him so. I had to shout at him quite a while before he would believe me. Then he wanted me to find the gunner officer, but I did not know where to find him. If I could have got to our guns I guess I would have had another medal for working overtime, but I missed the chance there.

About this time another bomb came over and clouted out the best friend I had in my company. Before the war he had been one of the finest singers in the Paris opera houses. When he was with us he used to say that the only difference between him and Caruso was $2,500 a night.

A polka and I dragged him into a dugout, but it was too late. One side of his face was blown off; the whole right side of him was stripped off and four fingers of the right hand were gone.

I stuck my head out of the dugout and there was the captain discussing the matter with himself, cursing the Germans from here to Heidelberg and putting in a word for the bombs every once in a while. All up and down the trenches you could hear our men cursing the Germans in all kinds of languages. Believe me, I did my bit and I could hear somebody else using good old United States cuss words, too. It certainly did not make me feel any better, but it gave me something to do. I think that was why all of us cursed so much then, though we were pretty handy with language at any time. But when you are under heavy fire like that and cannot give it back as good as you get, you go crazy unless you have something to do. Cussing is the best thing we could think of.

Up the trench the third bay was simply smashed in and the Germans were placing bomb after bomb right in it and in ours. The captain yelled out that he was going up to the next bay to examine it, but no more had he got there than he had his head taken clean off his shoulders.

At daybreak our trenches were all pounded in and most of our dugouts were filled up. Then Fritz opened up with his artillery fire right on us. We thought they were going to charge and we figured their barrage would lift and we could see them come over.

We received orders to stand to with fixed bayonets. Then the man at the periscope shouted, "They come!"

A battery directly behind us went into action first and then they all joined in and inside of five minutes about eight hundred guns were raising Cain with Fritz. The Boches were caught square in No Man's Land and our rifles and machine guns simply mowed them down. Many of them came half way across, then dropped their guns and ran for our trenches to give themselves up. They could not have got back to their own trenches. It was a shame to waste a shell on these poor fish. If they had been civies the law would prevent you from hitting them—you know the kind. They could hardly drag themselves along.

That is the way they look when you have got them. But when they have got you—kicks, cuffs, bayonet jabs—there is nothing they will not do to add to your misery. They seem to think that it boosts their own courage.

An artillery fire like ours was great fun for the gunners, but it was not much fun for Fritz or for us in the trenches. We got under cover almost as much as Fritz and held thumbs for the gunners to get through in a hurry. Then the fire died down and it was so quiet it made you jump.

We thought our parapet was busted up a good deal, but when we looked through the periscope we saw what had happened to Fritz' trenches and, believe me, they were practically ruined.

Out in No Man's Land it looked like Woodworth's five-and-ten; everywhere were gray uniforms, with tin cups and accoutrements that belonged to the Germans before our artillery and machine guns got to them.

Our stretcher bearers were busy, carrying the wounded back to first-aid dressing station, for, of course, we had suffered too. From there the blesses were shipped to the clearing station.

The dead lay in the trenches all day and at night they were carried out by working parties to "stiff park," as I called it.

A man with anything on his mind ought not to go to the front-line trenches. He will be crazy inside of a month. The best way is not to care whether it rains or snows; there are plenty of important things to worry about.

CHAPTER VIII.

On Runner Service.

One night a man named Bartel and I were detailed for runner service and were instructed to go to Dixmude and deliver certain dispatches to a man whom I will call the burgomaster and report to the branch staff headquarters that had been secretly located in another part of town. We were to travel in an automobile and keep a sharp watch as we went, for Dixmude was being contested hotly at that time and German patrols were in the neighborhood. No one knew exactly where they would break out next.

So we started out from the third-line trenches, but very shortly one of our outposts stopped us. Bartel carried the dispatches and drove the car too, so it was up to me to explain things to the sentries. They were convinced after a bit of arguing. Just as we were leaving a message came over the phone from our commander, telling them to hold us when we came. It was lucky they stopped us, for otherwise we would have been out of reach by the time his message came. The commander told me, over the telephone, that if a French flag flew over the town the coast would be clear; if a Belgian flag, that our forces were either in control or were about to take over the place but that German patrols were near. After this we started again.

When we had passed the last post we kept a sharp lookout for the flag on the pole of the old fish market, for by this time we would get our bearings—and perhaps, if it should be a German flag, a timely warning. But after we were down the road a bit and had got clear we saw a Belgian flag waving around in a good, strong breeze. But while that showed that our troops or the British were about to take over the place it also indicated that the Germans were somewhere near by. Which was not so cheerful.

As we went through the suburbs along the canal which runs on the edge of the town we found that all the houses were battered up. We tried to hail several heads that stuck themselves out of the spaces between buildings and stuck themselves back just as quickly, but we could not get an answer. Finally we got hold of a man who came out from a little cafe.

He told us that the Germans had been through the town and had shot it up considerably, killing and wounding a few inhabitants, but that shortly afterward a small force of Belgian cavalry had arrived and driven the Boches out. The Germans were expected either to return or begin a bombardment at any moment and all the inhabitants who sported cellars were hiding in them. The rest were trying to get out of town with their belongings as best they could.

On reaching our objective we made straight for the Hotel de Ville, where we were admitted and after a short wait taken to the burgomaster. We questioned him as to news, for we had been instructed to pick up any information he might have as to conditions. But we did not get much, for he could not get about because of the Germans, who had made it a policy to terrorize the people of the town.

We had just got into the car and were about to start when the burgomaster himself came running out. He ordered us to leave the car there and said he would direct us where to go. He insisted that we go on foot, but I could not understand when he tried to explain why.

We soon saw the probable reason for the burgomaster's refusal to ride in the car. All around for about a mile the roads were heavily mined and small red flags on iron staves were stuck between the cobblestones, as warnings not to put in much time around those places. Also, there were notices stuck up all around warning people of the mines and forbidding heavy carts to pass. When we got off the road I breathed again!

After a great deal of questioning we finally reached our destination and made our report to the local commandant. We told him all we could and in turn received various information from him. We were then taken over to the hotel. Here we read a few Paris newspapers, that were several weeks old, until about eight, when we had dinner, and a fine dinner it was, too.

After we had eaten all we could, and wished for more room in the hold, we went out into the garden and yarned a while with some gardeners, and then went to bed. We had a big room on the third floor front. We had just turned in, and were all set for a good night's rest, when there was an explosion of a different kind from any I had heard before, and we and the bed rocked about, like a canoe in the wake of a stern-wheeler.

There were seven more explosions, and then they stopped, though we could hear the rattle of a machine gun at some distance away. Bartel said it must be the forts, and after some argument I agreed with him. He said that the Germans must have tried an advance under cover of a bombardment, and that as soon as the forts got into action the Germans breezed. We were not worried much, so we did not get out of bed.

A few minutes later we heard footsteps on the roof, and then a woman in a window across the street, asking a gendarme whether it was safe to go back to bed. Then I got up and took a look into the street. There were a lot of people standing around talking, but it was not interesting enough to keep a tired man up, so I lay the hay.

It seemed about the middle of the night when Bartel called me, but he said it was time to get up and get to work. We found he had made a poor guess, for when we were half dressed he looked at his watch and it was only a quarter past seven, but we decided to stay up, since we were that far along, and then go down and cruise for a breakfast.

When we got downstairs and found some of the hotel people it took them a long time to get it through our heads that there had been some real excitement during the night. The explosions were those of bombs dropped by a Zeppelin, which had sailed over the city.

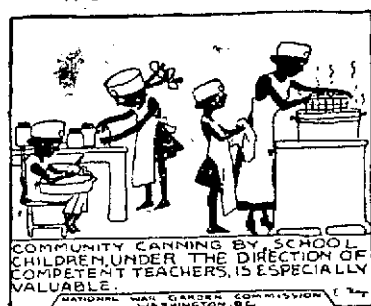

The first bomb had fallen less than two hundred yards from where we slept. No wonder the bed rocked! It had struck a narrow three-story house around the corner from the hotel, and had blown it to bits. Ten people had been killed outright, and a number died later. The bomb tore a fine hole and hurled pieces of itself several hundred yards. The street itself was filled with rocks, and a number of houses were down, and others wrecked. When we got out into the street and talked with some army men we found that even they were surprised by the force of the explosion.

We learned that the Zepp had sailed not more than five hundred feet above the town. Its motor had been stopped just before the first bomb was let go, and it had slid along perfectly silent and with all lights out. The purr that we had thought was machine guns, after the eighth explosion, was the starting of the motor, as the Zepp got out of range of the guns that were being set for the attack.

The last bomb had struck in a large square. It tore a hole in the cobblestone pavement about thirty feet square and five feet deep. Every window on the square was smashed. The fronts of the houses were riddled with various sized holes. All the crockery and china and mirrors in the house were in fragments.

Dinner Stories

Mrs. Carico, a middle-aged and talkative ruralist, was appearing in a suit brought by her husband. She insisted on loudly commenting on loudly commenting on each answer given by the first witness. Repeatedly the judge requested her to keep quiet, but she persisted in audibly disputing putting the words of the witness.

Mr. Carico, the court demands that you keep quiet. Unless you do you will be held in contempt.

Giving the judge a savage look, the woman turned to her attorney and vociferously inquired:

"Who is that old guy who keeps buttin' in all the time?"

Everyone knew that Lieutenant Thorleigh and his pretty wife had failed to agree during their few years of married life, but no one quite liked to ask him where she was living during his last months of training in this country. So when an innocent newcomer inquired point-blank where she was, there was a rather intense moment before he said, calmly:

"My wife is in France."

"What is she doing?" was demanded further.

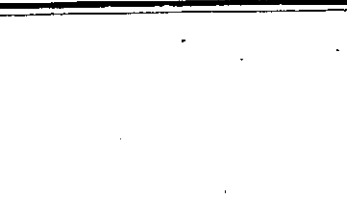

"Fighting," everyone exclaimed.

"Well," he replied, "perhaps she isn't actually fighting, but I'm sure she's quarreling."

Borrowly met a long-suffering creditor the other day and extended toward him a whiskbroom.

"Why the presentation?" asked the creditor. "My payment is not especially dusty."

"No, but it will be in a minute. Sweep a place before you have your fit. I am going to pay you the $50 I owe you."

A GOOD ONE. Freddy—Carpets are curious things, aren't they?

Milton News

Milton, July 20.—The following letter was received here yesterday:
New York City, N. Y.,
U. S. S. Celebes,
July 16, 1918.

The American Red Cross Society, Milton, Wisconsin.

Dear Members and Friends: The saying is "Tis Better Late Than Never" and that is the reason that I take the liberty to write to your society and thank you for the sweater that was presented to me upon leaving for service in the navy, and I want to say that even in this time I have enjoyed the comforts of it many times when I have stood sea-watches.

It is the most comfortable garment that a man-a-war could wish for as at any time at sea the air is quite cool, especially at night.

Since leaving Milton in March I have had the privilege of making one trip to France, and return, and as soon as arrangements are completed we will be on our way again for some European port.

Until a person can see it with his or her own eyes no one can realize the amount of work that is being carried on by the Red Cross, not only in the states, but abroad, and from what I have personally seen it is my sentiments that the Red Cross society is entitled to all the credit for their work that can possibly be given to them.

The other day I received a letter from a little Miss in the Grade School at Milton and she wrote that she was saving her money for War Savings Stamps, and she hoped that I as well as the rest of the service men would derive some benefit from it, and it did me good to know that even the children were doing all they could to free the world from the war that is facing each and every one of us today.

My work aboard ship is very pleasant and I enjoy it very much. I have charge of the ship's store, that is where the men buy their cigarettes and tobacco, writing paper, candy and extra staples that they might care to buy. Then I also have charge of the Paymasters' stores, that is where the men are issued their clothing and all other accessories that they are required to have, and lastly I have charge of the U. S. mail personal and official, so I manage to keep busy. Thanking the society again, and hoping that all the boys hailing from our Wisconsin village will return safely when the strife is over, an honor to our home and country, as well as to the "Uncrowned Queens", our mothers, I remain

Respectfully yours,
Frank W. Cartwright

French Train System and U. S. Woman Too Much For Officer

He Was a Young U. S. Subaltern on Special Mission and Her Desire to Be Helpful Might Have Cost Him Straps, But for Heavy Rain.

A SOLDIER'S MOTHER IN FRANCE

By Rheta Childs Dorr.

Article XVII.

I shall never hear that musical classic, "Where Do We Go From Here?" without remembering a young lieutenant I tried to be a mother to in France. I really led the mother to in a terribly astray, and but for a bit of luck at the end I might have got him court-martialed.

The whole thing grew out of the fact that so many of the men in France are mobilized that they haven't enough left for train conductors and station guards.

I had to travel for hundreds of miles in France and never have your ticket taken up by anybody. I have a collection of French railroad tickets which I bought and used, but never had to show to a conductor.

One of these tickets entitled me to ride first class from Bourges to a certain large American military camp about seventy-five or eighty miles distant. I bought the ticket one morning last spring and was informed by the polite Frenchman behind the ticket that it would be necessary for me to change at a junction about midway in the journey.

"They allow you barely five minutes to make the change," he warned me, "but you cannot miss the train. It is the Paris express."

The train marshaled. We were slightly delayed, and when I reached the junction I made a dash for the station platform and looked around for my train. There were several standing there, so I ran, suitcase in one hand and typewriter in the other, in frantic search for it.

There was only one, but I missed him and asked him to indicate the Paris express.

"Platform 3," he exclaimed. "But hurry, hurry, madame. Already the train has departed. And surely enough the queer little tin whistle which is characteristic of French trains was shrilling its starting signal and the doors of the carriages were slamming."

I dashed across the tracks and almost into a young officer who was looking wildly around and calling in English for a porter. Seeing my O. D. uniform, he recognized a comrade, and implored me to tell him if I knew which train he took to go to Bourges.

"Come along," I flung over my shoulder, for I was still racing for that moving train. "I'm going there, too."

We just made it, flinging my suitcase and typewriter in, and falling in after them ourselves. The lieutenant had no luggage.

I was tired, having been up late the night before, and without any more conversation I curled up in a corner and went to sleep. I must have slept for an hour, and after I awoke the train rolled on for another hour without coming to a stop.

We were alone in the compartment, and no conductor appeared. So I spoke to the young officer. "I thought you were only about an hour and a half from the junction," I remarked.

"I thought so, too," he answered. "But I don't speak a word of French, so I don't always get very precise information."

Parts Express, But— "Well, the guard told me that this was the Paris express," I said. "We must be on the right train."

We commented on the singular lack of train conductors, and the lieutenant said yes, you could travel all over France free if you had luck. He had traveled for forty-eight hours for one train and eighty continued. At least, the only ticket he had been asked to surrender cost one franc eighty. The rest were in his pocket.

But he didn't expect traveling alone in a foreign country. "I couldn't even ask for a bottle of French mustard," he said. "I resolved that I would be nice to that young man and see that he got safely to his destination. But when another train went by and we still didn't reach Y— it occurred to me that I might not be very much of a guide."

I opened my suitcase, got out a map of France, found the junction from which we had started and watched for the name on the next station.

We were on the Paris express all right, but we were going to Paris instead of away from it, as I had intended. We were within a mile or two from the city of Orleans.

I broke the news to the lieutenant, and he turned a little pale. "Simply had to get to Y— that night, he had to go."

He was on a special mission and had been charged to deliver his message as quickly as possible.

"Even if we get there this evening," he added, "I don't know how I am going to get out to the camp. They don't allow officers to sleep in the town, you know. They know I'm on the way because I sent all my luggage on ahead."

Some More Hurry. "Perhaps there is a train back very soon," I suggested. "Let's get off at Orleans and wait."

We did. The lieutenant carrying my suitcase, and both of us hurrying as fast as we could to the ticket office. What was the next train was about to start.

"Hurry, hurry, Madame and monsieur. You will miss it unless you run. It was necessary to change at Y— mentioning the very junction where our unfortunate lives had been joined."

We ran, without stopping to buy tickets, and scrambled breathlessly aboard the moving train. Nobody asked us for any tickets, and we actually traveled the entire distance back to X— without paying the French government a single sou.

We arrived about 7 o'clock, dark with our final destination, still forty-five miles ahead. Moreover, there was no train before midnight.

The young lieutenant was very blue, but he agreed that there was no use waiting, and we might as well go up town and get some dinner. We would have to go together, whether we liked it or not, because we couldn't get along alone. We had a dinner and by the time it was finished it suddenly occurred to me that I had had about enough of that strange young man's society.

It was obvious that he had enough of mine because he is a little bit dangerous for an American officer to be seen in a lady's company in France. Officers are not supposed to have women companions, and if a member of the military police were to see him carrying a woman's suitcase through a civilian town the policeman soldier might develop a little curiosity. And what a funny story we had to tell after all. Childhood.

On to Bourges. "I think," said the lieutenant, "that you can get along all right now. I am very tired and I believe I will take a room in this hotel and stay over until tomorrow."

He brightened up amazingly and said that it was a capital idea. But when I asked for a room the little patron declared that she didn't have a bed in the house. Perhaps I could get one at the hotel opposite.

"Remember," I warned him, "we shall have barely time at the junction to make that other train. I know which track it is on now. We'll be ready to jump when this one stops."

Did as He Was Told.

But our train was shunted onto a side track a little way out of Bourges, in order to let some troop trains pass. We were late, and we got into X just in time to see the train for Y disappear around a curve.

"See here," I said to the pale and despairing man. "I do not propose to spend the rest of my life traveling between this wretched junction and the city of Bourges. I have already spent twenty-four hours traveling thirty-five miles. At this rate I should die of old age before I got back to America. You go up town and find a motor car, anything that will go, and we'll finish the journey in that."

"How can I expect to find a motor car," cried the lieutenant. "You know as well as I do that no pleasure automobiles are allowed to run in France, and this hotel won't have any taxicabs. Besides, a taxi down to Y— would set us back two or three hundred francs."

The next day we met at an early luncheon and again we set out for X.

"Never you mind about that," I retorted. "You do what you are told. You go straight up town and look for a car."

We quarreled by this time, exactly like a married pair, and with quite the air of a defeated husband departing on his quest. In a short time he came back. Of course, there was no motor car to be had, he reported, but he had had some luck. A colonel's limousine had broken down somewhere in the neighborhood and it was being towed down to Y— by an army truck. He had heavily subsidized the doughboys who were accompanying the truck, and they had agreed to stop on a certain corner long enough for us to surreptitiously get into the limousine.

Rain Was Friendly.

It was a beautiful car, apparently in pre-war days the property of some woman of fashion. The upholstery was of pale French gray and there were all sorts of scent bottles, tablets and flower holders in silver and cut glass. But it was a terribly open limousine, all windows, and the lieutenant and I were conspicuous objects. The old truck that towed us made a lot of noise, and at every village we passed through the people ran to the doors and windows and cheered vociferously with delighted laughter.

The worst was getting into camp at Y—, but here the bit of luck happened. It began to rain just before we arrived, and when we rolled in the rain was coming down in such sheets that everybody except the men on guard were under cover. Nobody saw us but the soldiers who examined our passes. So the lieutenant's military career was saved.

We never met again. The lieutenant, I am sure, hopes we never will.

AUSTRIA NOW AWARE OF U. S. FORCES IN FRANCE

[SEEKS GATINGS IN] Washington, July 20.—Austria now knows a million Americans are now in France and is beginning to realize what American intervention in the war means. A dispatch from Berlin today quoted the Vienna Arbitrator Zeitung as saying the question now is whether the German army can force a decision this year before the U. S. is able to throw the whole weight of its forces into the balance.

AMERICAN RED CROSS TRYING TO LEARN FATE OF QUENTIN ROOSEVELT

Washington, July 20.—Every effort is being made by the American Red Cross through the International Red Cross in Switzerland to obtain word of the fate of Lieutenant Quentin Roosevelt.

If the young aviator is a prisoner in German hands, the possibility of which is indicated in cable dispatches from France, the Red Cross may receive information to this effect within three or four days.

DIVER SINKS EASTERN STEAMSHIP; CREW SAVED

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] An Atlantic Port, July 20.—The Ancon line steamship Elysia, 6,387 tons gross, was sunk by a submarine May 23 in the Mediterranean. It was carrying a cargo from the far east. It was reported here today by a passenger arriving on a British steamship. The Elysia was one of a convoy of 23 vessels. The crew was saved.

TENT SHOWS BARRED IN OKLAHOMA

[BY INTERNATIONAL NEWS] Oklahoma City, Okla., July 20.—The recent order of the Oklahoma Council of Defense in barring all carnivals and tent shows has caused much talk among the theatrical following all over the United States. In answer to a recent query from the "Billboard" the following reasons were given:

"First, the carnivals and tent shows employ a number of people who should be in profitable industry; next, a large number of the shows which operate in this state are far from the best morally—many of them being of the 'forty-niner' variety; they take from the country a large amount of money which could be used for war purposes, without bringing any benefit to the people in exchange; especially in the harvest fields and where laborers are employed they decrease the efficiency of farm labor."

Clean out the attic by getting rid of odds and ends stored there. A little classified ad will do the trick.
